

From the beginning, international relations have played an important role at MHH. International cooperations as well as mobility is highly supported, and the worldwide network of contacts to universities and hospitals is constantly growing. MHH is nationally and internationally recognized for excellence in research and teaching. Students, scientists and physicians from abroad are eager to come to Hannover Medical School for their studies, research, or employment. PhD students and scientists from all over the world are involved in a wide variety of research projects at MHH and partner institutes.

We kindly invite you to come to Hannover and send you a very warm ‘welcome’!

MHH provides its students with a broad spectrum of opportunities for study and work abroad. Such exchanges are possible due to partnership agreements and bilateral cooperation agreements e.g. in programs from the EU (Sokrates/Erasmus).

In addition, international PhD programs at MHH attract many highly qualified students for research and teaching. These activities are bundled in Hannover Biomedical Research School (HBRS).

In case of any questions concerning international affairs, please contact Prof. Dr. S. Lenzen (Dean of international affairs) or the International office.